Revolutionary Ironmasters

Start America's 250th birthday year strong by attending a lecture with researcher and author Dan Graham on Pennsylvania ironmasters during the Revolutionary War. By the 1760s, John Potts had laid the foundation for a strong and lucrative family iron empire. After his death in 1768, many of his sons continued the Potts iron legacy, enduring through the darkest moments of the colonies' war for independence.

Suggested $2 donation per guest. In the case of inclement weather, the lecture will be moved to Saturday, January 31st.*
